How Your Contribution Is Used

RFA General Fund Annual Contribution. The $25 annual contribution maintains the member’s active status in the USC Retired Faculty Association and is used to pay for operating expenses, advocacy on behalf of retirees and a contribution to the Emeriti Center in exchange for staff support. That support includes maintaining the RFA data base, recording financial data, answering phone calls and inquiries, handling RSVPs for RFA events, and supporting RFA events.

Any contributions to the General Fund above $25 are used to help pay for the RFA Distinguished Lecture Series and special events, and to allow the RFA to develop new services for its members. The RFA has no other sources of income to support its activities.

Caldwell Neighborhood Scholarship. The Caldwell Scholarship was started in 1966 by the late Professor Russell Caldwell as a way for faculty and staff to support students from the USC neighborhood to attend USC. The program is now sponsored by the RFA and administered by the USC Financial Aid Office. Awards are $3,000 per academic year. Students are grateful both for the financial help and the expression of support from the retired faculty. This program enables retired faculty to be involved in supporting the larger community and educating the next generation.

RFA Endowment Fund. The Robert P. Biller RFA Endowment Fund was established in April, 2007 to provide long term support for the Retired Faculty Association and its members. Those who contribute are helping ensure that the RFA can continue to serve its members and the USC retirement community for years to come. Income from the endowment fund can be used to help with emergency needs and to expand RFA services and activities.
